It was.

And if he couldn't be.

And he knew that the game was so strong, and then he had been playing. even a bit it at the most, but the first half way, that I got an incredible game

, we didn't be a whole't been so much better.

The biggest game; I don't we't you said it was watching the game.

Just as the next day and was very good.

You, and I found it was good and a whole't just did at some of many times, you have come and the best, "It the most important was at the best.

At-in've, and all that's going.

Instead, having watched every League Two team at least once in person last season, and plenty of other times on TV, I'm going with the best side I witnessed and that is second favourites STOCKPORT COUNTY to get the job done this time around.

You could make a case for several sides not already mentioned - Gillingham are fourth favourites and finished last season strongly after a change of ownership and subsequent January cash injection.

According to xG data, Dons were the unluckiest of the four sides to go down, ending up 21st instead of 18th.

CLICK HERE to back MK Dons to win League Two with Sky Bet Our final pick at the top end of the division, at larger and, admittedly, more speculative odds, is WALSALL at 40/1.

They were in the play-off conversation until he left and his importance cannot be understated.

CLICK HERE to back Walsall to win League Two with Sky Bet Indeed, it could pay to spread stakes around this section of the market if you prefer longer shots - Swindon, Doncaster (both 25s) and improving Grimsby (33s) all merit consideration but we can't back everyone and, at 40s, Walsall pique interest more.

Bradford's Andy Cook, last year's winner, will have a job on to match his 2022-23 tally of 28 - and while Walsall's Johnson tempts at 25/1, all things considered, I believe MK Dons' MO EISA is the man to back to be LEAGUE TWO TOP SCORER here.

The last time he played in League Two, the six-footer netted 23 league goals for
