The company announced record net revenue of $582.

What CDI executives said about sports betting

Carstanjen said the company would continue to build its profitable TwinSpires on line horse betting business.

Some will need more services than others," Carstanjen said.

"We have a suite of services that we can provide for people, not just technology, but content, etc.

The business-to-business online strategy is among the five areas the company will focus on for future growth.

"TwinSpires is driven by committed players," he said.

Content creators with more than 10,000 followers, at least five videos, and 600,000 minutes of viewership in the past 60 days are eligible to embed ads in their Reels. These new advertising options are currently available in the U.S., Canada, Mexico, and 50 other countries. According to TechCrunch, the revenue for overlay ads will be split: 55% to content creators and 45% to Facebook.

Since launching Reels, Meta tested numerous ways for creators to monetize their projects, including the Reels Play bonus program, which pays a "bonus" to anyone whose Reels get at least 1,000 views over a 30-day period. The Reels

Play bonus program pays creators up to $35,000 per month, but it's an invite

-only feature.

Meta reports that the most discoverable Reels are ones that are relatable, engage an audience, tell a story, and inspire others.

Reels that have a narrative encourage viewers to watch until the end.

For example, creator Kurt Tocci uses Reels to share comedic skits about his life -particularly his cat, Zeus. One of his viral Reels, "What It's Like Having a Cat," is relatable for any cat owner, engages his target audience of comedy fans, tells a story about his experiences with Zeus, and includes a call to action to inspire viewers to post pictures of their own cats.

In 2013, on an evening when you were probably eating pizza on the couch, security at Melbourne's Crown Casino were busy turfing out a high roller who had allegedly tried to dupe the house out of $32 million dollars.

"We could not believe what he had won and some of the bets he placed were very, very suspicious," a former Crown employee told The Age, saying that the attention of security was quickly drawn to the man.

Later that night, some large gentleman arrived at the door of the businessman's room to discuss the matter as the majority of funds had not yet been credited to him, he was asked to leave and not come back.

The very next day, the businessman was due to participate in a Crown Casino PR stunt, in which he would order the world's most expensive cocktail, a $12,500
