Third-party sellers know what it takes to make it on Amazon: Get good reviews and a high search ranking. But attracting genuine customers is tough, so some sellers use a reliable cheat - bribes. Because of Amazon's vast scale, inscrutable algorithms, and capricious enforcement of its own rules, unscrupulous sellers and paid shills largely get away with it.

Amazon reported that in 2018, customers spent $160 billion on items from third-party sellers - 58% of all sales on the site. More than 1 million sellers joined Amazon marketplaces around the world that year, according to e-commerce data firm Marketplace Pulse. In this year's shareholder letter, Amazon CEO Jeff Bezos wrote: "Third-party sellers are kicking our first party butt. Badly."

With thousands of new sellers signing up every day, there is a lot of competition - much of which comes from China. A Wall Street Journal story found that in 2018, a new product from China was uploaded every 1/50th of a second. "After that, the ads for free stuff just multiplied tenfold," she said

"I really don't think I'm making money on it at all. I'm pretty
