As the gambling industry reaches new heights in the Garden State, responsible gambling becomes an even more sensitive but important subject. But at the same time, casinos can't be too authoritarian in a country that prizes freedom so highly. For the most part, gambling companies around the world have done an adequate job when managing this delicate balance over the years.

When requesting land-based exclusion, you can choose from three options: A one year period of exclusion; Five years of self-exclusion; A lifetime ban. Those intending to enroll in a self-exclusion program may also take a Self-Exclusion Problem Gambling Quiz with 20 questions prepared by Gamblers Anonymous, an organization supporting compulsive gamblers since 1957.

Finally, it's important to underline that, while the NJ DGE will do its best to implement your self-exclusion, it is not infallible. As such, the DGE is not liable for any losses as a result of players deliberately circumventing their own exclusion.

According to the National Council on Problem Gambling, an estimated 4 to 6 million people[2], or 2% to 3% of the adult population, struggle with "mild to moderate" gambling issues.

BetMGM MA, Caesars Sportsbook MA, DraftKings Sportsbook MA, and FanDuel Sportsbook MA have emerged as the top four online sportsbooks by market share on a nationwide basis. They are all owned by large, highly ambitious and well-funded companies, which has allowed them to see off many rivals in the battle for market share.
