France made waves in the music world this week when it published a report on fak e streams. The country's new government agency, Centre national de la musiqu e (CNM), found more than 1 billion music streams in France alone were fraudulent in 2021.

The report includes data from Spotify, Deezer, and Qobuz. To put it in perspecti ve, Spotify and Deezer are about equally popular in the country - which is the f ifth largest streaming market in the world. The study also did not include data from Apple Music, YouTube, or Amazon Music, which MIDiA Research estimates accou nt for about 35 percent of users.

So while this study was likely only able to pull from around 60 percent of the c ountry's total streaming market, it's still a huge sample size. And that

1 billion number could be even higher, since the report is not able to account for fraudulent streams coming from services that mask their actual location with the use of VPN services.

More Context About All These Fake Streams

Alright, so 1 billion fake streams in one year sounds like a lot. It amounts to anywhere between 1 and 3 percent of the total number of streams in that country.
