In addition to promoting camaraderie among friends, sports betting can enliven otherwise boring or one-sided contests when handicapping systems offering odds and point spreads increase the bettor's stake in the competition.

A winning bet on the favourite offers a lesser payoff-e.

, a bet of $5 on a 2-to-5 favourite yields a $2 payoff.

A bet on the underdog team grants the bettor the point spread.

Several bets also can be grouped together in what is known as a parlay bet.

The proliferation of media coverage of sports and the variety of information se rvices available give bettors a sense of control and confidence that encourages them to wager.

They often keep betting even when they lose, blaming losses on bad luck or bad performances by players, coaches, or referees.

Points Totals Explained

As a bettor, you need to figure out if the total number of points scored by both teams will be OVER or UNDER the set total.

At the sportsbook, the odds should look like this:48.

Conversely, if the game ended with 47 combined points, the game went UNDER.

A PUSH in sports betting is when a total is a whole number like 48 points and the combined score hits it exactly.

The betting line for both the OVER and UNDER are typically at -110 or -105 but can be shifted by betting sites to smaller or greater odds depending on certain factors.

It's up to you to weigh those elements and decide if they can impact the game.

Websites that do not enforce a rigorous mechanism for verifying the identity of the reviewer and simply hide behind the idea of "protecting user's privacy" benefit from a practice that causes more harm than good: fake reviews.

These websites have chosen to boost their numbers (by getting more reviews) over creating an environment that is fair to the businesses being reviewed.

Writing a Fake Review

Fake reviews are a common problem on many online review platforms, and they can have serious consequences for businesses and consumers alike. But why do people write fake reviews? Here are some of the most common reasons:
