This is called a "hedge," and it's an advanced sports betting strategy.

An example: If you bet on the Yankees to win the World Series at +2000 odds, and then they make the World Series, you could place a bet on their opponent to mitigate risk.

Hedging helps minimize loss potential at the cost of winning potential.

Why do I need a calculator for my hedge bets?

How much do you have to bet to minimize your risk by a certain amount? Or what if you want to guarantee profit? At what odds do you have to jump in on the opposite bet, and for how much money?

Our calculator answers all of those questions for you so you can be ready to jump on the best bet at any moment.

Simply insert your initial bet odds and bet amount, and enter the hedge odds in order to see how much you have to bet on those odds in order to make a profit from a hedge bet.
